egfeld, jr., has hitched his wagon way for a long time to come. the new De Koven-Cook roopera at the Lyric last night veritable triumph.

Van Studdiford astonished even st ardent admirers, and she has role of Maid Marian with the ns, by the brilliancy of execuand exquisite quality of tone with she rendered the tuneful numbers tted to her by the composer, and addition she exhibited an appreciaof the value of lines and dramatic tions that is distinctly rare in opera stellardom. From her first rance to the final fall of the curshe sang and acted in a manner carried her straight to the hearts her audience. Clear as that of a , her voice rose and filled the Lyric the most delightful melodies that been credited to De Koven since first production of "Robin Hood." star Miss Van Studdiford can be said to have arrived. Really No Limit.

the production and company ich the star was surrounded. worn and often overworked "The management has spared expense," is distinctly apropos in case. There was but one drawck to the success of "Red Feather. is was the absolute lack of comedy in the book and the painful efforts of Thomas Q. Seabrooke to supply the leffciency. Seabrooke is credited with being the most notoriously bad "first night performer" on the stage and he deserves the title.

be sure, there were numerous in the audience, members of the first-night brigade and friends of the actor or management, who were ready with excuses such as "You know Tom is always nervous on a first night," "Searooke jur wed for with one rehearsal and has only played the part a week, you know," and all that sort of thing, but that these excuses are accepted in return for a blot on what would otherwise have been a perfect performance is but an evidence of the extreme good nature of New York audiences.

tragic events of the murder of the s, whose vocal explosives and Polish Jew, and quoting from the Jew's Polish Jew, and quoting from the Jew's greeting in entering the Burgomaster's Inn he remarked with serious emphasis "Peace to thee." There was a slight ripple of mirth that steadily swelled to a loud guifaw that for fully three minutes demoralised the audience.

But this ripple did not tend to destroy the appreciation of Sir Henry's splendid work in "The Bells." In fact, the audience rose to him with such enthusiasm that the actor was forced to make one of his dramatically facoherent speeches in which he expressed his deep gratitude for the splendid signal of approbation he had received.

Sir Henry also gave his splendid portrait of the veteran of "Waterloo."
